ICC COMMISSION ON COMMERCIAL LAW AND PRACTICE (CLP)

Thursday, 16 June 14:00-18:00

Felix Meritis

Keizersgracht 324
Amsterdam

This session of the CLP Commission, to which also non-members of the Commission are invited, intends to give an overview of the activity of the Commission and to discuss a number of topical issues in which the Commission is involved: European contract law; choice of general principles of law as the applicable law; anti-corruption.

After the session of the CLP Commission there will be the presentation of the new ICC model international franchising contract, followed by a cocktail.

14:00-14:20

The CLP Commission of the ICC: what it does, how to contribute to its efforts.

The task of the Commission: setting up rules for facilitating international trade (Incoterms, model contracts, model clauses) and discussing issues which are relevant for the development of international commercial law. The need to involve businesspeople and lawyers dealing with cross-border contracts. How to become member of the Commission.

Emily O'Connor, Senior Policy Manager, ICC Commission on Commercial Law and Practice.

Camilla Pagnetti, Policy Manager, ICC Commission on Commercial Law and Practice.

14:20-14:40

European Contract Law.

The European Commission is currently looking at contract law as an area for potential harmonization and/or development of a new legislative instrument. After the publication of the draft of a "Common Frame of Reference", a set of rules and principles drafted by an academic research network, the Commission has launched a consultation on the possible options in the area of European Contract Law. On 26 April 2010, the Commission set up an expert group on a common frame of reference which should prepare a user-friendly text in simple language, which could in the future become an optional instrument for cross-border contracts within the European Union. The expert group is meeting regularly with a group of key stakeholders: three members of the CLP Commission are participating regularly on behalf of the ICC. Two members of this "sounding board" will give an update of the ongoing discussions and will discuss the possible outcome of the project.

Christian Steinberger, Director of Legal Services, Germany Engineering Federation, VDMA; Vice Chair of the CLP Commission.

Bengt Kriström, Legal consultant, Stockholm, Vice Chair of the ICC Task Force on European Contract Law.

14:40-15:00

General Principles as the applicable law: presentation of the ICC project.

In recent years the alternative of submitting an international contract to general principles of law (lex mercatoria) together with the Unidroit Principles, instead of a national (domestic) law has become an alternative solution which the parties can use, especially if possible disputes are submitted to arbitration. ICC has created a task force which is examining the various issues and is preparing a set of guidelines.

Fabio Bortolotti, Chair of the CLP Commission, Professor of Law, University of Torino; Buffa Bortolotti & Mathis, Torino.

15:00-15:20

The ICC recommendations on combating extortion and bribery.

In recent years the issue of bribery and the risks involved for companies involved in critical situations (like, for instance, the payment of commissions used by the intermediary for corruption purposes) is increasing.

François Vincke, Vice Chair ICC Commission on Corporate Responsibility and Anticorruption.

Two members of the task force will discuss the criteria which were adopted for drafting the model contract.

Anders Fernlund, Advokatfirman NOVA AB, Stockholm.

Amelie Pohl, PF&P Rechtsanwälte, Gasteig; rapporteur of the ICC task force on franchising.

Organizing a distribution network in the US

New trends regarding termination of distribution contracts

Three parallel workshops on waiving contractual rights, discrimination within or between networks and franchising in selected countries

The International Distribution Institute (IDI), the leading organization dealing with international distribution law, will hold its 2011 Annual Conference in Amsterdam.

The conference is addressed to lawyers and businesspeople involved in negotiating, drafting and managing international distribution contracts (agency, distributorship, franchising, etc.) and will deal with a number of topical issues which justify an in-depth discussion between the participants and qualified experts in this field. The conference has been organized in collaboration with the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC).

SETTING-UP AND MANAGING A DISTRIBUTION AND/OR FRANCHISING NETWORK IN THE UNITED STATES.

Morning Session - Friday 17 June 08:00 - 13:00

Companies from outside the US know that the US market offers very interesting opportunities, but are nevertheless afraid to approach this market which is often considered to imply substantial dangers for the foreign exporter, such as the risk of product liability claims, the cost of defending a case, the complexity of the legal environment, etc.. In fact, many of the above fears are exaggerated and several typical risks can be substantially reduced by accurate planning and preliminary knowledge of a number of basic issues.

The purpose of this session is to give the foreign exporter a better knowledge of a number of key issues, which will be discussed with US lawyers having specific experience in dealing with foreign parties who wish to enter the US market. Various speakers will examine the main alternatives of the foreign exporter (appointing one or more agents/sales representatives; appointing a distributor/importer; establishing a subsidiary; establishing a network of franchisees or dealers) and give a general overview of the main legal aspects which arise within each type of solution.

A panel will finally discuss a number of critical issues regarding mainly the choice of the applicable law and jurisdiction.

AWARDING LONG TERMS OF NOTICE TO TERMINATED DISTRIBUTORS: A NEW TREND?

Afternoon Session - Friday 17 June 14:00 - 18:00

Until some years ago it was understood in most legal systems that distribution contracts could be terminated at will with a relatively short notice (3-6 months), especially if such period was expressly stated in the contract. However, in recent years there is a trend to protect the distributor by granting longer periods of notice (between one and three years) and to award the distributor damages for the lost profit for the period of notice he could not benefit from. This new trend appears particularly in France with respect to Article L.442-6 I 5° of the French Code of Commerce, regarding the so called rupture brutale.

In France the “rupture brutale” gives rise to a liability in tort, which may not be covered by the contract existing between the parties. This may have unforeseen effects on the validity of possible choice of forum or arbitral clauses contained in the distributorship contract, an aspect of particular interest in cross-border trade and which will be discussed by a panel of experts.

CHAIRMAN

Klaus Meyer Swantee, Retired Partner of Derks Star Busmann, Amsterdam; Member of the IDI Council.

14:00-14:20

The trend towards protecting distributors in case of termination: a general overview.

The various means used by courts and legislators to protect distributors: social statutes (Belgium) application by analogy of the rules on commercial agency (Austria, Germany, Spain, Switzerland, etc.); unjustified enrichment; recovery of investment (Austria); long periods of notice (the Netherlands, France).

Silvia Bortolotti, Buffa, Bortolotti & Mathis, Torino; Member of the IDI Council and Secretary General IDI.

14:20-14:40

When courts set aside the contractual notice periods: the example of the Netherlands.

In two recent cases Dutch courts have granted an exclusive distributor long periods of notice (2 and 3 years) in case of termination, although the contract provided for shorter periods. The speaker will discuss if this shows a general trend in Dutch case law.

Jaap van Till, Van Till Advocaten, Amsterdam; IDI country expert for agency and distribution (the Netherlands).

14:40-15:00

A special situation: the “rupture brutale” in French law.

Under article 442-6, 1-5° of the French code de commerce an established business relationship can be terminated only by complying with a reasonable minimum notice period. This rule applies also to contractual relations, and especially to distributorship contracts. Courts are recognizing minimum notice periods from 3 to 24 months.

Didier Ferrier, Professor of Law, University of Montpellier; Vice-President IDI; IDI country expert for agency, distribution and franchising (France).

15:00-15:20

Calculation of the damages due to the distributor for insufficient period of notice.

The damage for not having been granted a sufficient period of notice normally corresponds to the loss of profit during such period. However, how to calculate such loss of profit? Should it be based on the gross or net profit and how should these be determined? Two experts will examine this crucial issue with reference to case law in Belgium and French law.

Ingrid Meeussen, LVP Law, Brussels; IDI country expert for agency and distribution (Belgium).

15:20-16:00

PANEL on jurisdiction and “rupture brutale”.
Can your distributor bring an action for rupture brutale before his own courts although the contract contains a jurisdiction of arbitration clause?

Since the violation of Article 442-6, 1-5° of the French code de commerce implies a tortious responsibility, some courts have considered that the distributor can bring his claim before the court which is competent for such issue, without respecting a possible choice of forum or arbitration clause. The case law is divided and it is not certain if this principle would prevail over jurisdiction or arbitration clauses in cross-border contracts. A further problem is whether such approach would be contrary to the Brussels I Regulation (Regulation 44/2001) in case of a choice of forum clause and to the New York convention (in case of an arbitration clause).

CHAIRMAN

Fabio Bortolotti, Professor of Law, University of Torino; Buffa Bortolotti & Mathis, Torino; President IDI; Chair ICC Commission on Commercial Law and Practice (CLP); IDI country expert for agency, distribution and franchising (Italy).

Marcel Fontaine, University of Louvain.

FIRST WORKSHOP

When does a party waive its rights by tolerating a breach: discussion of two case studies

Saturday 18 June 09:00 – 13:00

This workshop deals with the rather frequent situation where a party tolerates the breach of certain contractual provisions. Does this mean that it waives the right to require compliance by the other party? Does this apply to past violations or also to the future? And, what is the effect of possible non-waiver clauses? Two case studies will be examined and discussed with the public by two panels of experts from various (civil law and common law) countries.

CHAIRMAN

Marcel Fontaine, University of Louvain.

09:30-10:00

General introduction. Do contractual clauses always have the force we imagine?

It commonly happens that parties stipulate clauses which they do not actually enforce and which are invoked only when a dispute arises and the contract is terminated. Courts look at these situations in rather different ways, especially when the parties have expressly stated that possible tolerance does not imply a waiver. This issue can best be discussed on the basis of two specific cases.

Fabio Bortolotti, University of Torino; Buffa Bortolotti & Mathis, Torino; President IDI; IDI country expert for agency, distribution and franchising (Italy).

10:00-11:00

First case study. Terminating a contract because the distributor is selling competitive products.

A distribution contract contains a clause according to which the distributor undertakes not to represent any competing products. The distributor represents since several years a line of competing products. There is evidence that the supplier has always been aware of this and has tolerated this fact because he was anyway happy with the distributor's performance. Recently, the supplier found another distributor and would like to terminate the contract for cause, or – at least – require the distributor to stop representing the competing brand (in order to induce him to terminate). The panel will examine the following questions:

- Is the supplier entitled to ask the distributor to stop selling the competing products and to terminate for cause if he does not?
- Is the supplier entitled to immediately terminate for cause?
- Would the result be different in the presence of a non-waiver clause?

Marcel Fontaine, University of Louvain.

Lauri Railas, Krogerus Attorneys, Helsinki; IDI country co-expert for Finland.

Ágnes Szent-Ivány, Sándor Szegedi Szent Ivány Komáromi Eversheds, Budapest; IDI country expert for agency and distribution (Hungary).

Leslie Thiele, Whiteman Osterman & Hanna LLP, Albany (NY); IDI country expert for agency and distribution (U.S.A.).

11:00-11:30

Coffee break

11:30-12:30

Second case study. Non attainment of minimum purchase by a distributor.

The parties in a distributorship contract have agreed that the distributor would purchase at least certain minimum quantities of contractual products in the years 2008 and 2009. No minimum has been fixed for the year 2010. The contractual clause on termination for cause indicates the non-attainment of the agreed minimum turnover as one of the specific circumstances justifying termination without notice. The distributor purchases about 30% less than the minimum amount in 2008 and 2009 and a similar quantity in 2010. In June 2011 the supplier wants to terminate the contract for cause. The panel will examine the following questions:

- Can the supplier terminate the contract for cause because of the non attainment of the minimum turnover in 2008 and 2009?
- Can the supplier request damages (loss of sales) for the breach of the minimum purchase clause in the years 2008 and 2009?
- Would the result be different in the presence of a non-waiver clause?

Marcel Fontaine, University of Louvain.

Peter Gregersen, Horten, Copenhagen; IDI country expert for agency and distribution (Denmark).

Rocio Belda de Mergelina, Garrigues, Madrid.

Edward Miller, Reedsmith, London; IDI country expert for agency and distribution (UK).

SECOND WORKSHOP

Should a supplier/franchisor treat equally members of his network?
How to deal with parallel networks selling the same products?

Saturday 18 June 09:00 – 13:00

Members of a distribution or franchising network will normally expect not to be treated worse than the other members of the same network. Moreover, in case the same products are sold through other channels, they pretend not to be disadvantaged with respect to other resellers. In some cases a right to equal treatment is recognized by law or by case law. But, even where this is not the case, the supplier may wish to respect certain standards of equal treatment, provided this does not affect his right to reward performance and quality. This problem may also arise in case of dual distribution networks. These questions will be examined by experts of various countries and discussed with the public.

CHAIRMAN

Didier Ferrier, Professor of Law, University of Montpellier; Vice-President IDI; IDI country expert for agency, distribution and franchising (France).

09:45-10:15

Discriminating between members of the same network.

Statutory rules prohibiting discrimination generally (US Robinson Patman Act). Franchise laws in various US states prohibiting discrimination between franchisees.

Robert W. Emerson, University of Florida.

10:15-11:00

Possible discrimination between members of two different networks: how to avoid possible problems.

Franchisees or dealers may complain that other resellers not belonging to the network are granted better conditions (prices, assortment, etc.). This may happen with respect to company owned outlets or other stores (e.g. duty free) or when the supplier manages two different networks (dual distribution). How to deal with these complaints?

Stefano Artuso, General Counsel, COIN, Venezia-Mestre.

Claudia Kolb, Legal and corporate department, Gucci Spa, Firenze.

11:00-11:30

Coffee break

11:30-12:00

The use of uniform criteria for selecting outlets under EU competition rules and their impact on the members of the network

Under the EU competition rules on selective distribution implies that the distributors are selected on the basis of specified criteria. How does this impact on the rights of distributors? Are this criteria do be applied in a non-discriminatory way?

Didier Ferrier, Professor of Law, University of Montpellier; Vice-President IDI; IDI country expert for agency, distribution and franchising (France).

12:00-12:30

Possible conflicts between selective distribution systems and Internet sales.

Sales through Internet by the supplier (through his own website) or through companies specialized in Internet sales, may create problems to the members of his selective distribution network. How to avoid these problems through a system which incorporates the members of the network or by clearly separating the two channels? Another problem is to try to prevent non authorized dealers to sell through Internet.

Frédéric Fournier, Redlink, Paris.

THIRD WORKSHOP

What a Franchisor Should Know Before Negotiating a Franchise Agreement in Brazil, China, Japan and the United States.

Saturday 18 June 09:00 – 13:00

A franchisor which is considering offering franchises in a new country must be aware of how the franchise sales process is regulated in the country before initiating contact with prospective franchisees there. Some countries require registrations or disclosures before a franchisor signs an agreement with or accepts any payment from a prospective franchisee. Some countries will restrict the fees which franchisors may charge and may restrict the type of financial performance representations a franchisor may make to a prospective franchisee. Other countries may require franchisors to have registered trademarks before offering franchises or require a franchisor to provide franchisees with financial statements which meet the auditing standards of the franchisee's country. This interactive session with experts from four countries will address these issues as well as the impact of commercial agency and franchise relationship laws, laws prohibiting discrimination among franchisees, how venue and law selection practices are affected by local laws, and whether franchisors may lawfully restrict franchisees' ability to set their own prices and sell to whom and where they want.

CHAIRMAN

Carl Zwisler, Gray, Plant, Mooty, Mooty & Bennett, PA, Washington DC; IDI country expert for franchising (U.S.A.).

• Possible restrictions:

- during the contract: resale price, discrimination etc..
- on termination: lack of renewal, assignment of the contract.
